Whatcha Readin', Matey!!

The month of February was Reading Month for MLS-Sherwood and their theme has been all about pirates! Mrs. Driscoll's 2nd graders wanted to try their hand (more like their "peg leg") at poem writing!

The Pirate's Trip

By Aydan Beckedahl

The captain has a hook.
But he doesn't want to look.
First mate sees a ship.
It will be the end of the trip.
The captain has a gun.
But he has no bullets, not one.
The captain gets the crew.
But they don't know what to do.
The captain sails away.
But the ship doesn't want to stay.
The ships start to attack.
But the captain starts to react.
"Let it rip!" And the ships started to tip!

The Mad Captain

By Samuel Ellingson

Look, the captain got hooked!
The pirates just stood there and looked.
They tried to get him down.
But a pirate kept tripping on his gown.
Finally, the captain fell.
But he landed on a bell.
When the captain got up he started to scream.
The pirates just feed him some cream.
The captain is still mad.
So they tried to make him sad.
When he got sad he sat on a pad.
And he turned into a dad.
And that is very bad.
He had more kids than he actually had.

The Trip

By Isabell Buynak

The pirate steers the ship.
The pirate yells to the crew.
He says, "This is the best trip."
They sail on the ocean blue.

Amelia's Pirate Poem

By Amelia Hoffman

I met a pirate named Mate.
He used his crew as bait.
The sharks began to come.
They ate the sailor's thumb.
He swam back to the ship.
Before the sharks got his lip!

The Amazing Pirate

By Abi Klokstad

I know a pirate who is tall.
But he is the scariest of all.
He is not fat like a rat.
But he has a really big hat.
He is not really bad.
But he is really sad.
He has a big eye patch.
But he has trouble opening the latch.

The Struggle

By Emma Southam

The captain said, "Swab the deck!"
The sailor said, "I don't want to!"
The captain yelled, "My parrot will peck."
So the sailor said, "Swabbing the deck is my favorite thing to do!"
